Fiscal Year 2013 was an extremely busy year for The College of Physicians of Philadelphia and filled with many significant accomplishments.

Several extraordinary improvements were made to our National Historic Landmark building. Our Mütter Museum staff took on an enormous project to create our first new major exhibit since 2003. The Historical Medical Library participated in a collaborative project to digitize American medical journals. Finally, the Center for Education and Public Initiatives continued to grow its outreach and programming efforts.

The College of Physicians is extremely fortunate to have the commitment and support of its Board of Trustees, Fellowship, Museum Members and other donors, partners, and social media fans, who are all responsible for advancing our mission. We are delighted to share and celebrate our highlights with you.

Because of our donors, we continue to offer new and expanded programs that increase the number of students, teachers, scholars, artists, tourists, parents, and physicians we impact.
Designed by renowned architects Emlyn L. Stewardson and Walter Cope, the building on South Twenty-Second Street has housed the College and its unique collections and programming since 1909. This year, thanks to several generous gifts, we were able to make some significant improvements to our magnificent Beaux Arts building.

The Sir John Templeton Veranda was completed, seamlessly joining the Mütter’s Thomson Gallery to the Benjamin Rush Medicinal Herb Garden. Much of the garden was also renovated to increase its use as a space for conversation, programming, and celebration.

The restoration of the College’s balustrade and the replacement of our roof were both prioritized projects in our 2009 preservation assessment. Both projects will ensure the safety of our invaluable collections and together will maintain the structural and aesthetic integrity of the building.

An investment in our National Historic Landmark building is an investment in our future.
Our new exhibit on Civil War medicine, Broken Bodies, Suffering Spirits: Injury, Death, and Healing in Civil War Philadelphia, required a great deal of research, writing, and exhibit construction and fabrication to bring to life the amazing stories of Civil War doctors, nurses, and soldiers. A prominent 1,000 square-foot room on the upper level of the Mütter Museum was renovated for the exhibit.

Related programming began well before the exhibit opened, including a Civil War Hospital Day. Talented re-enactors, as well as high school students from our Karabots Junior Fellows Program, helped to recreate the atmosphere of the mock medical aid station.
Our Library has embarked on a digitization program, beginning with thousands of volumes of early American medical journals, as a part of a prestigious collaborative project with Harvard’s Francis A. Countway Library of Medicine, Yale’s Cushing/Whitney Medical Library, and Columbia’s Health Sciences Library. Digitized content will serve as part of the Medical Heritage Library, a digital consortium of major academic and special collections libraries. Approximately one-half million pages have been digitized with more than a million additional pages to be digitized over the next year.

Expanding access to our treasured collections for generations to come

The Historical Medical Library continues to attract scholars from around the world and researchers via our Wood Institute travel grants.
Providing unique experiences & health information everyday

SUMMER INTERNSHIP PROGRAM
A four-week program that offers engaging STEM content around themes of neighborhood violence and resiliency.

HIP2KNOW
A social media awareness campaign that presents teens with important information about sexually transmitted infections and safe opportunities to get tested.

KARABOTS JUNIOR FELLOWS PROGRAM
An intensive three-year program that provides practical assistance, mentoring, and academic and social support to underserved Philadelphia high school students.

The Center for Education and Public Initiatives targets students, particularly those from underserved Philadelphia schools serving large populations of teens from low income families. In addition, we offer important health information that is medically accurate and impartial for teens, parents, and physicians.

HISTORY OF VACCINES
An important web resource that educates and informs parents, students, and the general public about how vaccines have been developed and how they contribute to human health.

During the past year, HOV published a book and poster to complement and expand access to the site.
Tri Nguyen was part of the first cohort of the award-winning Karabots Junior Fellows Program. During summer 2009 before his sophomore year, Tri began the three-year program that eventually helped him obtain a full scholarship to Villanova where he is now majoring in Biology/Pre-Med. Originally from Vietnam, Tri attended Cardinal Dougherty High School until the end of his sophomore year when it closed. The bonds that he had already made with the other junior fellows helped him through what would have otherwise been a challenging transition to a new school for his junior and senior years. Although Tri benefited from all aspects of the program, it was his amazing mentor relationship with College Fellow Carl Norden, MD, that was most significant. Dr. Norden has continued to serve as a mentor and advisor to Tri long after the conclusion of the program. Expressing his gratitude for the program, Tri said, “I am especially fortunate to have had Dr. Carl Norden as my mentor. He was a very inspiring mentor and friend. It doesn’t matter where you came from and what you know, the dedication you put into your work is what truly defines you.”
